The Art of the HIDDEN STRATEGY

The Art of the Hidden Strategy trace the evolution of technology through the past and into the present and proposes a plan for America for the future. For over the past 40-50 years, our country has been complacent and operates in a "Maintaining what we have" paradigm.

The vision for where we are headed has left the population with a feeling of "Worry about today and the future will take care of itself." Complacency is the enemy of business, in life, and, may I suggest, the enemy for countries which do not have a plan.

The three c's - customers, competition and change - have created a new world for business in order to build a shared view of what can be improved.
